Old Winter hugs tight.

It's a pretty slim outlook for that Easter hat next Sunday.

The liquor raids keep merrily on in spite of the shortage of license commissioners. Let them jingle.

A great many people would wish that they are on a par with the national average capital indebtedness of $35.50.

Montpelier decides tomorrow night whether it will have a city home or allow its city government to remain an outcast.

STATE LOSES VALUABLE CITIZEN.

The state of Vermont lost one of its most progressive business men, as well as a sturdy citizen, in the death of John S. Holden of Bennington last week. During the past score or more of years, he has been closely allied with the best interests of his adopted home town, being perhaps its leading business man. But he had not confined his energies to one section, as his great holdings in the granite industry at Hardwick testify. He was largely responsible for the building up of the business in that town with the formation of the Woodbury Granite company, acknowledged as one of the leading firms of the country for turning out building stone. Mr. Holden was further interested in that section in the Woodbury & Hardwick railway for carrying granite from the Woodbury quarries to his large cutting plant. In his home town his investment turned toward woolen goods manufacture, and his mills furnished the chief employment in Bennington as his granite plant did in Hardwick. His varied business interests did not, however, prevent him giving good service to his town and state. His term as state senator in the last legislature gave him opportunity to employ his business sagacity in the upholding of the present administration, so-called. He was a quiet yet forceful man in the deliberative body. Altogether his death is a serious loss to the state.

THE PUBLIC WILL MUST RULE.

The newspaper comment throughout the state on the present middle aged appointment of license commissioners in Barre, or rather the failure to appoint, seems thus far to entirely incline to the belief that the assistant judges of the county would be upheld by the court in their appointment of the commissioners after the sixteen days' limit of the law. The St. Albans Messenger states the situation fairly in the following: "The people of Barre have declared their will under the terms of the statute, and, by those terms, have acquired the right to the sale of intoxicating liquor in their city for one year. The people have performed their part under the law and so far as they are concerned the contract is complete and their right vest. It is not reasonable, therefore, to believe that the mere failure of one or two public officials to comply with certain details of the law can prevent the great body of the people from entering upon their right to the sale of liquor."

There must, of course, first be a board of license commissioners to give out the licenses to sell liquor, and the simple fact that the assistant judges failed within the sixteen days to appoint such a board does not wipe out the main principle that the majority of the people of the city voted to permit the licensed sale of liquor, and must have the right to that sale. Therefore the sixteen days' limit of the law must take a secondary importance to the main fact that since Barre voted in favor of license there must be a board of commissioners to superintend that sale.

Talk on Easter Lilies!

The following hint on preserving Easter Lilies, given by an experienced grower, may prove of service to lovers of flowers at this season:

"To preserve the bulbs, knock out of pots, then break off some of the top soil and plant in a flower bed, and they will be pretty apt to blossom the second time during the Summer, and by protecting with a covering of manure and evergreen boughs, to prevent freezing and thawing, they may be used the following season, but are not suitable for pot culture again."

Leave your orders early for Easter Lilies. We have the promise of the best lot ever shown in Barre.
